CAUSE

On November 18, 2005, U.S. Probation Officer Luis R. Gonzalez of the District of New Jersey Probation Department conducted a field home contact to the offender, John Serrano's residence. Since the offender's release in July 2004, he had been under the supervision of U.S. Probation Officer Gonzalez. Nevertheless, upon U.S. Probation Officer Gonzalez arrival to the offender's home on that date, the offender apparently did not recognize him. When Officer Gonzalez questioned the offender about his daily plans and activities, the offender's responses were incoherently answered. The offender reverted back to his childhood, while verbalizing that he wanted to sleep. U.S. Probation Officer Gonzalez and the offender mutually agreed that the offender's lack of motivation and change in behavior began after the offender's breakup with his girlfriend in February 2005.

By way of background, the offender paid $50 toward the special assessment. He remains enrolled in a drug treatment program where he satisfactorily reports as scheduled. His most recent urinalysis in February 2006, returned negative for illicit drug use. The offender is currently employed as a barber, earning approximately $300 a week in a local shop. He maintains residency at his parents home in Linden, New Jersey. Prior to February 2005, the offender had lived with his girlfriend and had spent most of his leisure time with her.

On February 10, 2006, the offender signed the attached Probation Form 49, agreeing to participate in a mental health treatment program. On behalf of the District of New Jersey Probation Department, we respectfully request that the Court order the proposed modification with consent of the offender.

Respectfully submitted by,
